

Nature Knowledge Workshop

Sponsored by the Natural Science Section of the Sierra Club-Angeles Chapter

June 10 – 12, 2011

Enjoy a weekend of nature discovery in the San Bernardino Mountains. Learn about the wonders that surround you from naturalists who share their expertise in bird and mammal identification, ecology, geology, entomology, botany, and a variety of other subjects.

Location: A streamside camp in the San Bernardino Mountains near Barton Flats
Dates: June 10-12, 2011; Friday evening through Sunday afternoon
Cost: Sierra Club members: $138; non-members: $158

Cost includes:

- Two nights lodging in dormitory cabins (6-8 people per cabin; bring your own sleeping bag). Tent or car camping is also available (bring your own tent).
- The camp staff serves six hearty meals (Friday dinner to Sunday lunch).
- Workshops and instruction on insects, birds, geology, botany, ethnobotany, ecology, and mammals.
- Three guided nature walks in a variety of habitats at the camp.
- LTC credit available for Sierra Club Leaders.
