WORDS FROM MICHAEL BRUNE

In the Jan/Feb 2017 issue of the Sierra Magazine, Michael Brune, the Executive Director of the Sierra Club, wrote a full page article to us called "Turning Walls Into Bridges". We recommend that we all read the article in its entirety. However, we want to share one of the paragraphs today to help guide us during the year.

"But though it might seem like everything changed on Election Day, it didn't. The Sierra Club's values have not changed. We still believe in justice, fairness, and equality. We believe in democracy. We believe that it's a good idea to replace fossil fuels with clean renewable energy. We believe that people have a right to drink clean water and breath clean air. We believe it's vital to care for our public lands, protect wildlife and our last wild places, and encourage people to get into the outdoors. No election result can change that."

SUGGESTED POST CHRISTMAS READING.

Many of us received gift cards during Christmas for stores such as Amazon and Barnes and Nobles. Here are few suggestions for your winter reading:

Douglas Brinkley, "The Wilderness Warrior". Brinkley focuses on Theodore Roosevelt's love of the outdoors and the wilderness from his youth, growing years and his later years in the presidency. If you want to know all about Teddy, this is not the book, but if you want to learn more about his growth as a person in loving and supporting the wilderness and what he did about it, this is it!

Douglas Brinkley, "Rightful Heritage", Brinkley focuses on Franklin Roosevelt this time. The parallels between the two Roosevelts are amazing. We often think about FDR in the Great Depression and in WWII. We don't often know about or to pay much attention to his desire to protect the land, the water, and the people, and how they mesh together.. Both are tremendous sources to better understand how much both of the Presidents did to preserve the wild places of this country. I was surprised to learn how much FDR used the power of the Presidency to set aside wildlife refuges, create more National Monuments and Parks to provide places for people to enjoy the outdoors, and so much more.

Richard Preston, "The Wild Trees", Preston tells the story of a tiny group of daring botanists and amateur naturalists that found a lost world above California in the largest and tallest organisms the world has ever sustained, the coast redwood trees, Sequoia Sempervirens. Instead of giving in to the prevailing belief that the giant redwoods were not climbable, these young people, went ahead, climbed them and discovered an unknown fantasy world in the heights. As a result, they changed the way the world thought about the Coastal Redwoods.
